THE LATE ROBERT OWEN THE "SOCIAL REFORMER."

He was born in Wales in 1771, made his mark as a bright scholar in his native town at the early age of nine years, went from school into a grocery shop, and at the age of fourteen went to London. When eighteen years old he became partner in a cotton factory, into which Arkwright's machinery had just been introduced; afterwards established the Charlton Mills, near Mancheter, and after conducting that concern for some years undertook the famous speculation at New Lanark in Scotland, where he and his partners had the management of the mills and a farm of 150 seres, and a population of 2,000 persons .-Mr. Owen was at the head of this enterprise for a quarter of a century, extended great sums of money, was visited by princes, clergy, and the curious from all countries, wrote elaborate treatises on the benefits of a government like that of New Lanark, which did away with punishment and the terrors of the penal law, and diligently disseminated his peculiar doctrines.

In 1828, he essayed to introduce his theory of government in Mexico, but was unsuccessful. He afterwards attempted to establish a "New Moral Community," which failed; started a "Labor Exchange Bazaar," w ich also met a sudden end; and in 1857 u ged his claims to a seat in Parliament, in wich effort be likewise failed. Mr. Owen made several visits to the United states, the last of them having occurred some ten years ago. While here he received marked attention from the social reformers, and omitted no opportunity to bring his theories prominently before the public. Mr. Owen was very enthusiastic in his devotion to schemes of social re-organization; was an avowed freethinker; had a faculty of fixing the attention

cility; was a man of impressive presence and

A correspondent enquires of us, if we have ever seen Parson Beecher, of New York, and if so, what is his appearance, his flesh marks, and his indications of intellect? We have seen him in private conversation on a boat, on the North Hudson. We pronounce bim a fine looking man, in some respects. He has a wicked, greedy and lustful eye, an intelligent forehead, a sensible mouth, an expressive cheek, an insolent chin, and altogether a profune and secular look. His dress is on the toppish order, his air is bombastic, and whether he disgusts the bystander more, or amuses him less, with his display of rhetorical absurdity, forensic folly, or clerical gravity, is a question the mind is trying to determine. He seems to wish to impress spectators with the belief that he is the learned author of holy discourses, at one time, at another, that he is the hero who once "bathed his feet in the blood of sixty-three knights," and at other times, that he is the son of the woman who demanded John the Baptist's head in a charger. He looks all the time like he wants to swear, and at no time like he desired to "lead in prayer." He is altogether a decidedly original man; and if he were to turn actor upon the stage, lawyer at the about one half of which is in good wood, and bar, tapeter in a grocery, quitting the pulpit in disgust, he would give no offence to his Maker, further than his conduct in his new occupation might offend .- Knoxville Whig. REFORM.

An organization has been formed in Pennsylvania, whose object appears to be to effect a moral reform, by a two-fold movement. 1. To provide attractive schools for desti tute and neglected chidren; and 2. To es tablish a reform school for criminals. The aim in both cases is the same. It recognizes industry and intelligence as the foundation stones of moral culture, and education as the proper means to prevent crime before it has been committed, and also the only means by which a reformation can be effected where persons have already been led exquisitely describes the crown jewels in the Winter Palace at St. Petersburg:

been established in the city of Erie.

"The stones are of the largest and rarest kind, and the splendor of their tinte is a delicious intoxication to the eye. The soul of all the fiery roses of Persia lives in these rubies; the freshness of all velvet sward, whether in Alpine valley or English lawn in these emeralds; the bloom of southern seas in there sapphires, and the essence of a thousand harvest moons in these necklaces of pearl."
